

Abstract

A computer-implemented audio advertising system for providing audio advertisements to users over a network. An advertising management server receives audio advertisements and advertisement account data over the network. An advertising database stores the audio advertisements and advertisement account data. Upon requests from telephony services, an advertising selection and retrieval server fetches audio ads according to a set of effective searching criteria. The retrieved audio ad is played to users of the telephony services.